Date set for Fairfield Post Office closing

No deal on the appeal for the Fairfield post office

The Postal Regulatory Commission signed and delivered the fate of the Fairfield Post Office Feb. 9 with a split decision. In the event of a split, the commission sides with the Postal Service's decision. The decision means the post office's retail services will end on Friday, May 18.

The contention between the citizens of Fairfield and the U.S. Postal Service continued for more than a year and all avenues of appeal have been exhausted.

Many people have bought post office boxes at the Bloomfield post office less than four miles from the city, according to Fairfield Mayor Tom Trent, in anticipation of the closing.

"It's a case of big government pushing people around and getting what they want," Trent said. "When we appealed we told them the numbers they used as grounds for closing were wrong."

According to numbers from U.S. Post Office Review Coordinator Tim Reynolds, the post office

Four arrested for trafficking cocaine, thefts

ERIN L. MCCOY
emccoy@kystandard.com

More than a dozen law enforcement officers conducted three simultaneous searches at residences at Federal Place and Harrow Court in Bardstown Wednesday afternoon, resulting in the arrest of four people suspected of trading stolen property for cocaine and other drugs.

The search warrants were executed by the Bardstown Police Department and Kentucky State Police about 5:30 p.m.

"Because of the multiple locations and multiple suspects we basically needed every officer on duty from first and second shifts and called in off-duty officers and two Kentucky State Police troopers to help us secure the locations," a press release from Bardstown Police stated.

Capt. Tom Roby said 12 officers and two state troopers were dispatched to duplexes at 128 and 131 Federal Place and a house at 114 Harrow Court.

"We knew that stolen items were at all three locations. We knew that narcotics had been distributed from at least two of those locations in the last 48 hours," Roby said.

The search reportedly uncovered stolen items from Wal-Mart and from about half a dozen burglaries and resulted in the arrest of Quentin Montgomery, 33, Tiffany A. Yates, 20, and April L. Tonge, 29, all of Bardstown, as well as Antonio Mason, 36, Bloomfield.

Roby said police hope to make at least two more arrests related to this case.

Law enforcement reportedly seized almost 50 grams

Eric King, senior reporter for the WLKY television station in Louisville, tells Bardstown Elementary School children that they can be the best at anything — as long as they work hard to achieve their goals. He encouraged kids to work hard in school and talked about how he achieved his dream of being a news anchor. "There is no better feeling than having a teacher hand you a test and reading the questions and going, 'Ha! I got this,'" King said.

Governor commits funds to repair dangerous road

ERIN L. MCCOY
emccoy@kystandard.com

Gov. Steve Beshear has allocated $300,000 to repair a flood-prone stretch of KY 46, Nat Rogers Road.

The funds come out of the governor's excess or restricted road funds, state Rep. David Floyd explained.

"$300,000 is generally the maximum they would give for that purpose," Floyd said.

The stretch of road known as Bull Run has been the site of a number of car accidents through the years. The most recent occurred Nov. 29, when a 71-year-old Boston man, Stanley "Ned"

Rosenbaum, drove off the side of the flooded road, and died when his car sank underwater.

The allocation would fund about 40 percent of a project to raise the road above water level, according to estimates from Nelson County Judge Executive Dean Watts. The most recent cost estimate for that project is $747,291. That figure takes into account area property owner Steve Cecil's commitment to contribute fill dirt to the project, according to Watts.

"That's what we call a practical solution, versus building a $2 million bridge," said Watts, referring

City takes next step to finding new fire chief

LISA TOLLIVER
ltolliver@kystandard.com

The application process for finding a new chief for the Bardstown Fire Department has closed.

Mayor Bill Sheckles said about 12 applications were received for the post, which will head up the city fire department as well as the Bardstown-Nelson County Fire Volunteer Department Inc., commonly referred to as the "corporation." The two departments share space, equipment and some volunteers in a station behind Bardstown City Hall.

Under a newly passed ordinance, the fire chief will now be appointed by the mayor matching the process for the selection of other departments within the city. In the past, the chief was voted on by the volunteers of the fire department and then appointed by the mayor. This led to two fire chiefs serving at the same time this year. Anthony Mattingly, who had been chief since 2005, was serving as chief of Bardstown Fire Department when fire department volunteers voted Marlin Howard into the post.

Sheckles saw a problem with having two chiefs over the same group of firefighters and proposed a new ordi-

Thomas Nelson HS names its band director

TOM DEKI F

Nelson County Schools

Shawn Robinson, an accomplished musician, music teacher and conductor, will be the first leader for the Thomas Nelson High School music program, the high school announced Thursday.

"He's a very successful conductor. He's a very dedicated musician, and first and foremost, he is intent on making great things happen for kids," said TNHS Principal Wes Bradley in announcing the selection.

For Robinson, the position will amount to somewhat of a homecoming.

A Kentucky native, Robinson is director of bands for Mesilla Valley Christian Schools in Las Cruces, New Mexico, and music sirector and principal conductor for New Horizons Symphony Orchestra and Las Cruces City Youth String Ensemble.

“The position is such an exceptional opportunity. As a first, I’ll get to set a standard of excellence” for the program, said Robinson, who grew up in Elizabethtown and is a graduate of Central Hardin High School. His wife, Stephanie, grew up in Nelson County and is a graduate of Nelson County High School.

Robinson said he is most excited about the opportunity to build a program from scratch, while returning to Kentucky adds icing to the cake.

Robinson earned a Bachelor of Music Education at Western Kentucky University and went on to earn a Master's in Instrumental Conducting from New Mexico State University.

A versatile musician and instructor, Robinson has experience working with musicians of many ages, currently including a nine-year-old trumpet player and an 89-year-old cello player.

Robinson also has experience building band and music programs, including the New Horizons Symphony, which started as a small community group that has grown to become a full-fledged and well-respected orchestra. Robinson also grew the Mesilla Valley music program to include a marching band, jazz band, wind ensemble, a beginning band and a seventh- and eighth-grade concert band.

As the first band leader for TNHS, Robinson is happy he will have the opportunity to “do it right from the beginning,” by doing everything from overseeing the purchase of appropriate band equipment to “making sure my people make the right sounds with their instruments” by building up their technique and making sure they can “play deftly and accurately.”

Robinson keeps an active performance schedule and has a long-term goal in Nelson County to "create a symphony and have it perform excellent music."

For the first year though, Robinson's goal will be to "create a piece of work the kids can be proud of. I want them to be able to look back on their work and be proud," Robinson said.

Among his own accomplishments, Robinson is proud to have won a conducting concerto while at Western, and to have been the principal tuba player for a WKU band that toured Russia that year (spring, 2005).

"My principal instrument is an ensemble. It is a difficult instrument to play but very rewarding when it comes together," Robinson said.

Bardstown cemetery prices on the rise

LISA TOLLIVER

ltolliver@kystandard.com

Cemetery prices are on the rise.

Bardstown City Council approved the first reading of an ordinance that will increase the cost of plots and the opening and closing of graves.

If approved on second reading, the cost for plots near the front of the cemetery, near North Third Street, will increase from $400 to $500. The cost for plots farther back into the cemetery will increase from $350 to $450. The price increase would allow the city cemetery costs to be similar to those at St. Joseph Cemetery, which sits next to the Bardstown Cemetery. St. Joseph raised its prices in October from $350 to $500.

Other increases include the opening and closing cost for graves from $250 to $400; opening a grave for an urn would increase from $100 to $150; the cost of a baby grave would change from $50 to $150; and the cost of opening a baby grave would increase from $100 to $150.

The first reading passed unanimously with City Council member Tommy Reed making sure the ordinance still must pass a second reading before it becomes official.

"That still gives the public two weeks to interject," Reed said. "I just wanted to make sure the public has plenty of time."

The number of cemetery plots being sold lately has increased, according to City Clerk Bobbe Blincoe. But that usually happens when a price increase is on the horizon, she said. The Council approved 11 cemetery plots at Tuesday's meeting and Blincoe said Thursday she is continuing to sell plots at an unusual rate.

The ordinance that changes the price of the plots also changes the title of the public works director to the public works superintendent. It's strictly a change in title, Bardstown

Mayor Bill Sheckles said. The duties and salary remain unchanged.

While on the topic of the cemetery, Council member Bobby Simpson took the time to mention that cleanup at the cemetery is taking place before the mowing season begins in the spring.

Many people will put memorabilia on their loved ones' gravestones but sometimes those items can interfere with the mowers.

"We don't want to throw it away, but we can't leave it sitting there on account of the mowers," Simpson said.

He urged family members to check their loved ones' gravesites for anything that needs to be picked up or that could be hit by mowers.

Are we willing to serve God?

Last week we had communion at my church, and I didn't get to be a server.

I'm not sure why not, although I'm pretty sure it was nothing personal. It's highly unlikely that the person who makes the list looked at my name and thought, "We don't like her anymore. Ha ha ha."

Whatever the reason, I didn't make the servers' list for that week.

When I got the e-mail news that I had been cut, I was shocked. After all, I'm the Saturday-night-grape-juice/bread-over-on-the-left-side-of-the-sanctuary girl!

Harry Austin, who sits in the pew behind me, is one of my best regular customers! I'm not sure I like the idea of someone else telling him, "This is the body of Christ, broken for you" and "This is the blood of Christ, shed for you."

But, as the e-mail explained, they (whoever they are) wanted to shake things up a bit. Just because this is the way we always do things doesn't mean that's the way we'll always do things.

Churches sometimes get stuck that way.

The e-mail writer then asked if I'd be willing to be an usher instead.

It was that word "willing" that tripped me up.

Would I be willing? Am I willing to not do something I'm used to doing, something I love doing, something that has become my passionate avenue of service?

I don't do nursery. I don't fold bulletins. Frankly, I don't do a whole lot at the church other than take up pew space.

To be honest, I'm not all that willing. (There's that word again.)

And I hate that about myself. So, now I'm feeling guilty. I mean, after all Jesus has done for me, I'm wrestling with being willing/unwilling to do what? Be an usher at church? Take 10 minutes to walk up and down a church aisle?

That should be a no brainer. Jesus died for me — point me to the aisle you want me to usherize.

Except.
Except something in me — it has to be sin; what else could it be? — shouted, "No!" No, I don't want to be an usher. I want to be the grape juice girl and serve communion to Harry Austin and say, "This is the body/blood of Christ broken/shed for you."

I swear, sometimes I'm 7, not 57. Yes, I realize how very trivial this sounds, but it speaks to deeper issues. One: who am I serving with my service? I'm in church, doing a churchy thing, so it looks like I'm serving God. But I know full well that my service as a communion server gives me great delight, and serving God should bring delight. There's nothing wrong with that.

However, there's an awful lot of "me" and "my" in my service. I like it. I want it. I will be sad if you take it away from me.

Another issue: balking at my willingness to do something else. A true servant doesn't pick and choose her task for her master. A true servant does what she's asked or told to do.

Is that what it means to be a Christian? Are we to do whatever the church asks, whether we like it or not?

What about guilt? Is that a good enough reason to be an usher for a day? Guilt is an excellent motivator, but can it sustain me?

After all Jesus has done for me, I should just suck it up, quit whining like a little girl and be an usher. Put on my Mary Sunshine/Victory in Jesus face and "fake it 'til I make it."

Except God will see right through that and my service will stink like rotten fish.

As it turned out, I couldn't make it to church Saturday night, so I wouldn't have been able to be a communion server or an usher after all.

But that doesn't put to rest the deeper issue of willingness and guilt and service that pleases God.

The truth is, I'll never love God the way I should and my service will always be tainted with self.

Sometimes I think the best I can offer is the willingness to be willing.

Maybe even willing to be willing to be willing.

It's not admirable, but it's a start.

Waiver allows state to find new way to gauge student success

Pass or Fail. Those were the only two grades handed out with No Child Left Behind education law. There wasn't any recognition for improving test scores one year over the next and every school that failed was lumped together without any differentiation between schools with a low percentage of students who were failing to those schools where most all were.

We agree that NCLB didn't leave much incentive for the hit or miss grade that was handed out each year. Although the overall intent of getting children on grade level with reading and math was good, the measuring stick put into place was in many cases unattainable and didn't paint a true picture if schools were progressing toward their goal or not.

So the news last week that President Obama gave 10 states — including Kentucky — a waiver from meeting the requirements in the law was met with a loud round of applause from educators.

However, the waiver doesn't simply let Kentucky and the other nine states off the hook. All exempted states will be expected to enforce a serious state-led effort to close student achievement gaps for all students, promote rigorous accountability and ensure all students are on track to graduate college and career-ready. They must develop meaningful teacher and principal evaluation systems, reward the best performing schools and focus on helping their own struggling schools.

Local school officials feel that we're off to a good start in meeting those expectations with the implementation of State Senate Bill 1 which has much higher standards and accountability than NCLB ever had. They also agree that having the flexibility with one accountability system will allow the districts to focus on teaching strategies rather than NCLB testing.

While this wavier is a welcome relief, we certainly can't take our foot off the gas. Kentucky has made good educational strides before so now we've been given a golden opportunity to propel our state to the next level. Our educators must rise to the occasion, put their great minds to work and lead us to accomplish the task at hand to ensure future success for all Kentucky students.

OUR VIEWS

Trying not to predict the future

Humans — nearly all of us — have an obsessive desire to predict the future. The optimists rationalize why a good thing is sure to happen, while the pessimists are sure it won't. It's understandable why we want to do this: being able to correctly predict outcomes can be a valuable skill in a world in which wolves might lurk around any corner. But in the majority of cases, prediction isn't a life-or-death matter anymore. The question is, then, whether it has any value in such a situation.

When we want something badly — whether we've entered a contest or applied for college — a great deal of energy is spent in mulling over the possible results. You could even argue in a lot of these cases that we spend more time thinking about the conclusion before it arrives than after. If so, a positive outlook would be better — why not devote more time to a good feeling than to a bad feeling? The other side of that coin is that the let-down is greater if you don't get what you want — though I'm not sure how much greater the pain actually is.

» emccoy@kystandard.com

I've always leaned a bit more toward the pessimist's side, against my better judgment. I've come to the conclusion this is the least productive approach. Yet it is attached to yet another human instinct, perhaps just as integral as the impulse to predict the future: the instinct to protect oneself. Of course, pessimism loses any usefulness when we not only feel the pain of failure after we've failed, but even before.

I don't know why the inclination to pessimism has such a powerful grip. But one reason, I'm guessing, is that though on one face the person is suffering, on the other his or her life is much easier. She gets to watch TV, eat unhealthy foods and party instead of studying, exercising or staying home to work on a project.

But the real answer, I think, isn't optimism, either, but somehow trying not to predict the future at all. How much energy would we have if it wasn't spent on worry?

How much more would we enjoy today if we weren't thinking of tomorrow? How much more would we accomplish if we weren't preoccupied with past accomplishments?

Nor do I think this approach necessitates a suspension of desire. Nor do I think it's easy — I'm trying to accomplish it still.

But the recipe may be simple enough. Look around you: make sure you're seeing what you're seeing, not watching mental images — memories or predictions from somewhere else in time. Make sure you hear the sounds around you, smell the smells, taste the air, your food, your gum, your pen. Otherwise you're left with few memories of your past and far too many scenarios that never came true. Live today on only a simple faith that tomorrow will come.

Doing time with time

When I was young, I felt like a captive locomotive. Time didn't move fast enough for me. I couldn't satiate my young appetite for the world that waited beyond my rural landscape. Today, time moves far too fast. There is just enough time in a day for regret of what I haven't accomplished. Time eludes all reason — especially when it comes to a death.

Monday a friend who I hadn't seen in a long time passed away. I chatted with him just Sunday. Both of us complained about insomnia and how it always happens at a time of night when you can't really do anything without waking someone up. He was just 41 with three kids. He started having severe flu like symptoms and went to the hospital Monday. He died from a blood clot. I didn't find out until Tuesday morning. Where did his time go?

Aristotle said time is the most unknown of all unknown things. William S. Burroughs wrote in "The Place of Dead Roads" that we are like water creatures looking at the land as an alien medium and wondering how we can live in it. He writes that the water we live in is time and that we look toward space as that alien medium. I would disagree with his analogy despite the enjoyment his writing has given me. I would say the alien medium we try to live in is time.

Some days are longer than others and five years ago can seem like it just happened yesterday. We have measured out the movement of the sun into hours and months, but it doesn't bring us closer to understanding how to exist in this medium as a restless teenager, a senior citizen or the busy lifestyle/obstacle course of middle age. Sure, we have our planners and calendars to squeeze every drop out of the best time management regiment. But we can't grow more "time" on our windowsills or conceptualize the lifespan of 8,000-year-old spruce trees that live on a mountain range in Sweden. We use age (time) to gauge when someone is able to drive, vote and enlist into the armed services. We have preconceived notions of when someone has lived a "full" life and what amount of time that is in years, but we are always at a loss for when someone's time is too short. Whether it comes down to how to age with grace or cope with an untimely loss of life, time still escapes our reason and we will never have enough time to understand it.

Will success come from mandatory school attendance?

Every parent wants their children to succeed in life. Early on, parents can help by making sure that their child can read. And they need to keep them in school. This is the parents' responsibility, but some in Frankfort want to take that responsibility away from them by mandating school attendance until their children are 18 years old.

I'm sure everyone would prefer that their children avoid a life lived in poverty. We know, from exhaustive statistical analysis, just how to avoid that trap. Here are the basic steps: 1) finish high school, 2) get a full-time job, and 3) wait until you are married to have children.

In their book Creating an Opportunity Society, authors Ron Haskins and Isabel Sawhill observed, "Families that adhere to these norms or expectations have a very high probability of entering the middle class. Indeed, adhering to all three norms virtually eliminates the possibility of a family living below the poverty line."

So we have the formula, and the ability to solve the problem: start with the core values of discipline and hard work, taught or observed in the family that raised them; and then add ambition to acquire and maintain the skills that are needed. But, from where does the "ambition" come?

For most men, ambition is more highly developed in marriage. Marriage promotes responsibility and habits that result in increased productivity. (Married men earn more than single men with comparable education and work histories.)

Children who grow up in two-parent households are more likely to finish high school and college, maintain full-time employment, and enjoy a stable life themselves.

Laying the foundation for these core values in a young person is the responsibility of the family. The family is the basic unit of society — and this is not a cliché. (When I speak of family, I mean a person with his or her spouse and children.) When the family breaks down, doesn't it follow that society deteriorates as well?

We know that marriage is in decline, and single-parent households are on the rise. It shouldn't surprise anyone that both trends are reflected in an increase in Americans living in poverty.

These facts present a serious problem for our country. If, as the data show, the traditional family is the foundation of American success, then America has an interest in reversing the trend. Is your government doing anything to reverse this trend?

DAVID W. FLOYD

I'm afraid not. It seems, rather, that we are hastening the demise of the traditional family. We discourage marriage by encouraging behavior that is supported through government policies. Government steps in to replace the father by providing adequate financial assistance to single mothers, no matter how many children they have out of wedlock. That assistance can end if the mother gets married or goes to work. Do you see the perverse incentive here?

When men and women are not held accountable by family responsibilities, as in a marriage, they are "liberated" from the ambition that is so essential to their success. Man and woman become more dependent on government. People who come to depend on government tend to vote for those who will maintain or increase the support provided by government.

Meanwhile, American taxpayers must support an increasing number of those in poverty. They are diminished, as more and more of their property is legally confiscated to support a growing entitlement class.

What can we do? While we can work to reform policies that discourage marriage, we can also emphasize marriage. It starts in the family, but can be supported by elected officials and in the schools. How many successful campaigns have been undertaken in the schools? I remember my daughter, a fourth-grader at the time, announcing every time we got in our car "Seat belts, Daddy!" In school, children are taught the dangers of cigarettes, the importance of recycling, why not marriage, which is more consequential to their success in life?

Robert Rector, of the Heritage Foundation, suggests that we tell children of the disastrous consequences of having a child out of wedlock, how it almost cer-

Force public birth-control clinics, where poor and working-class women go for birth control, to provide information about the importance of marriage. And reduce the rewards of single parenthood in the welfare system.

The positive aspects of such a campaign will be healthy for our children and beneficial to our economy and culture. All of us want what's best for our children, and it's been proven that they have their best chance in life if they 1) finish high school, 2) get a full-time job, and 3) wait until they are married to have children.

To the editor:
I extend my most sincere thanks and appreciation to all those expressing good wishes regarding my recent Woman of the Year Award. However, please note that this was a group win. I could not have accomplished nearly what I have without the hard work and dedication of the members of the Bardstown Rotary Club, my exceptional co-workers at PNC Bank and of course the understanding of my family — husband, Phillip; son, John Wayne; and my mother, Bettye Taylor. Again, I am humbled and honored to be placed in the company of the women who have won this before me.

Brohm tabbed to start up TNHS program

pzubaty@kystandard.com

To build its football program from the ground floor up, Thomas Nelson High School reached for the stars and found a name that goes hand-in-hand with football in Kentucky.

On Wednesday, the school announced in a press release it had named Greg Brohm to be the Generals' first coach.

"The thing that intrigued me the most is the opportunity to take something from the ground floor and build it step-by-step," said Brohm, the former Director of Football Operations at the University of Louisville. "I've been fortunate to have had many great football influences in my life, and the chance to implement what I have learned in a new, fresh situation is exciting. It is a great responsibility — a great challenge to start a program and build a culture of success."

Thomas Nelson High School will compete at the junior varsity level its first season and take on a varsity district schedule after that.

son and take on a varsity district schedule after that.

Brohm, a wide receiver at Louisville in the '80s, hails from perhaps the most well-known football family in Kentucky. His father, Oscar, and brothers, Jeff and Brian, all played quarterback for Louisville.

Greg Brohm previously served as offensive coordinator and team president for the Louisville Fire arena football team, and also was an assistant coach at his alma mater, Trinity, and served the past two seasons as an assistant at DeSales. He also is active on the Louisville airwaves as a radio and TV host.

"He has such a unique football experience," TNHS co-athletic director Sara Thurmond said. "On the field; off the field; behind the scenes. At all levels."

Brohm was formally introduced Wednesday night at a ceremony at the Thomas Nelson fieldhouse, and he said his experiences as an assistant under several

District tourney schedule released

PETER W. ZUBATY
pzubaty@kystandard.com

Dates and times are set for next week's 19th District boys' and girls' basketball tournaments, hosted by Bardstown High School.

The girls get things going with a Tuesday night doubleheader, with top seed Nelson County (21-6) taking on Bethlehem (6-19) in the 6 p.m. opener. The Cardinals won both regular-season meetings.

After that, host and No. 3 seed Bardstown (11-16) takes on No. 2 seed Washington County (9-14) at about 7:30 p.m. The Commanders won both regular-season district meetings, but the Tigers turned the tables on them with a win in the 5th Region All A Classic.

The girls' 19th District championship is 7 p.m. Feb. 24.

The boys get started Wednesday, with top-seeded Bethlehem (20-4) taking on Nelson

When Josh Koontz started looking at colleges, he knew a big school wasn't the place for him. Instead, he sought out a place that felt like Bethlehem, and that's why he signed on last week to continue his football career at Lindsey Wilson College.

"I went to all the other colleges" that had expressed interest in him, Koontz said, but "I really didn't feel like I was at home."

When visiting LWC's Columbia campus, Koontz said he was attracted to the small-town feel and the coaches who embraced him.

"I just liked the small community," he said. "Everybody knows each other. It's like a family."

Lindsey Wilson, which competes in the NAIA Mid-South Conference, restarted its football program after several decades in mothballs. With that came new facilities, something that Koontz said was very attractive.

"They're brand-new — a lot better than the other schools I went to," he said.

Koontz, a lineman for Bethlehem, was recruited to play center. His father and Eagles' head coach, Ron Koontz, said Josh's abilities as a shotgun snapper in Bethlehem's spread offense fit in well with the Blue Raiders, who

Bethlehem's Braden wins Coach of the Year honors

pzubaty@kystandard.com

The 5th Region released its All-Region teams earlier this week, and a pair of local products top the list on the boys' side of things.

Bardstown senior point guard Anthony Myrks, who helped guide the Tigers to the Sweet 16 last year and the finals of the All A Classic this year, was voted Player of the Year by the 5th Region Coaches Association, garnering 16 votes.

He narrowly beat out former teammates Kyle Sheeran and Kelton Ford of LaRue County for top honors.

Myrks wasn't the only local to be so honored, however.

Artie Braden, in his second year back on the sidelines at Bethlehem, was voted Coach of the Year by his peers. The Eagles have rolled up a 20-4 record thus far this season and are the top seed in the boys' 19th District tournament, which starts Wednesday at Bardstown.

Also making the boys' All-Region team were Bardstown guards Jordan Brewer, senior, and Devonte Grundy, junior, as well as Bethlehem senior guard Jalen Phillips.

Only one local girl made the list, Nelson County junior center Cierra Drake.

Green County's Micah Jones was voted girls' Player of the Year, while Elizabethtown coach Tim Mudd garnered Coach of the Year honors.

It is uncertain at this point what class Thomas Nelson will compete in once the team is participating in a district varsity schedule. Enrollment projections suggest the Generals will likely end up in Class 2A, where Bardstown and Washington County would be natural rivals, or perhaps in 3A with LaRue County and Elizabethtown.

Brohm said success will come, but not instantly.

"I think the development of this program will be a process," he said. Playing the JV schedule the first year will "allow the players a chance to get to know each other and the new environment. It will help us bond as a team; allow us time to sharpen our skills as players and find our identity as a program. The community will be able to get to know us and we can learn and grow at a natural pace."

"I envision a program that is about the players, the school community, and the experience of high school football, which is so unique and rewarding," Brohm added. "This first year gives us the chance to ramp up. It's just working smart."

At Wednesday's ceremony, Brohm told the future Thomas Nelson students in attendance that, as the first students at the school, theirs will be a special experience.

"This place is new (and) it's exciting to be here," he said.

Thomas Nelson principal Wes Bradley said there was a lot of interest in the job and about 10 serious candidates were considered. Five of those candidates were interviewed, with Brohm emerging as the school's choice.

"We made a great hire," Bradley said.

The hire capped off a whirlwind week that also saw the school introduce new coaches for the boys' and girls' soccer programs, as well as volleyball. Bradley said that cycle of interviews took about 3-4 weeks, and there would be more coaches named when the next group of interviews wraps up in about a month.

of cocaine with an estimated street value of $5,000, along with about $5,000 cash and a handgun, allegedly found in Montgomery's possession. They also allegedly found Loritab pills, which are opiates, and Xanax pills, according to Bardstown Police Detective Lynn Davis.

A Suzuki motorcycle and car rims from two burglaries were found at the residences, Bardstown Police Detective Barbara Roby said.

The police department worked with Wal-Mart loss prevention, which reportedly provided videos of the suspects, to develop leads in the case, Roby said.

Officers were even aware that specific items might be at certain locations. Roby pointed out a green chainsaw and a Craftsman air compressor with a frayed cord, which they had reportedly been told they would find at Harrow Court.

Items stolen from Wal-Mart included a stereo system, a generator, tool boxes, fishing poles, a blender and a small air compressor.

Police also recovered stolen cell phones and a laptop computer.

"What we're having a pattern of is the drug dealers sending out drug users to steal things that they want," Davis explained.

The four suspects were arrested at their residences — Tonge and Mason live at 131 Federal Place, Yates at 128 Federal Place and Montgomery at Harrow Court.

There was a juvenile at one of the residences during Wednesday afternoon's operation, but will not be charged, according to Tom Roby. Another suspect was not present during the search and was not arrested, he

ERIN L. MCCOY/The Kentucky Standard

Bardstown Police Detective Barbara Roby reportedly recovered nearly 50 grams of cocaine, $880 cash, a marijuana grinder, scales and a handgun from one of the three residences at which a search warrant was executed Wednesday afternoon. AT RIGHT — Among the items stolen in about a half-dozen burglaries and from Wal-Mart were a Suzuki motorcycle, car rims, an electric generator, a stereo system, power tools and air compressors.

added. Montgomery was charged with first-degree trafficking in a controlled substance (cocaine), second offense, convicted felon in possession of a handgun, receiving stolen property and drug paraphernalia.

"Quentin Montgomery has a pretty extensive history," Roby said of Montgomery's criminal record. Mason was recently released from prison, he added.

Mason was charged with first-degree trafficking in a controlled substance (cocaine), first-degree possession of a controlled substance (opiates), receiving stolen property, marijuana possession and drug paraphernalia.

Yates was charged with first-degree trafficking in a controlled substance (cocaine), third-degree trafficking in a controlled substance (drug unspecified), second-degree trafficking in a controlled substance (drug unspecified), drug paraphernalia and receiving stolen property.

Tonge was arrested for first-degree trafficking in a controlled substance, first-degree trafficking in a controlled substance (opiates), receiving stolen property, prescription for a controlled substance not in proper container, marijuana possession and drug paraphernalia.

"People say the economy is what's spurring this crime spree, and that may be a small portion of it, but people aren't stealing this to buy groceries, they're stealing it to buy dope," Roby said.

revenue was $15,921 with expenses of $40,842 for 2011.

"When we had a postmaster there in 2009, by today's standards their salary would cost us $70,000 aside from other expenses," Reynolds said. "The postal service is losing about $24 million a day and, according to figures from the post master general, that is a $14.1 billion loss annually."

Saturday deliveries will discontinue by 2013 unless an alternative is found, Reynolds said. Reynolds attributes the drop in revenue to the widespread use of e-mail for correspondence and online bill payment options.

"We want to remain committed to the Fairfield community. Their addresses will not change and the plan for now is to keep the post office boxes inside the property after we sell it," Reynolds said.

The U.S. Postal Service actually owns the land and the building where the Fairfield post office boxes are located. A buyer for the property and the postal service are currently in contractual negotiations. The prospective owner will lease the space for the boxes to the postal service.

Citizens' concerns focus more on safety and identity and not necessarily the post office's services.

"If I get a mailbox with a rural carrier, my address could change with a Cox's Creek carrier or Bloomfield," Trent said. "This could potentially cause confusion for 911 services if they are looking for your house. This could also affect new businesses moving to Fairfield."

Former Fairfield Mayor Mary Ellen Marquess used to be a mail carrier and when Nelson County implemented the 911, the postal service was involved.

"The postmaster rode with the rural carrier and a road department employee and it was a measurement system," Marquess said. "You would measure the routes from the beginning of your route and determine the house numbers by the distance from your origin. If the people didn't like the name, sometimes citizens used the oldest person on the road."

Physical addresses for 911 calls are allocated by the planning and zoning commission, according to Nelson County Dispatch, and can be changed if necessary.

"This change won't affect anyone's physical address with 911," Reynolds said. "We (the postal service) don't have any part in the physical addresses citizens have with their local 911 services — no one gives a P.O. box number when calling for an emergency."

Physical addresses for emergency services won't change, but whether the identity of Fairfield, which had its first postmaster in 1818, is lost will depend on its citizens.

appointed Howard as interim chief.

With the ordinance now in place and the application process closed, Sheckles said he hopes a six-member search committee will be able to narrow down the field to about three applicants. The search committee is comprised of the three City Council members on the safety committee — Roland Williams, Bobby Simpson and Francis Lydian — two members of the fire departments and Assistant City Administrator Larry Green. The committee will meet at 5 p.m. Monday in the Mayor's Conference Room to go over applications.

Dad's sudden death reveals the life he secretly led

DEAR ABBY: My father died suddenly a year ago. My sister went to his house and discovered something that deeply disturbed her. Dad was secretly gay. There were lots of materials in his home that I'm sure he never intended for us to find. Personally, I find his interests fascinating, but my sister was unhinged by it. After all, she was the one who made the discovery.

It is almost impossible to determine who knew what and when, if both the individuals are dead. I hope, with time, your sister will be able to focus on the good times she had with her father and her obsession will lessen.

DEAR ABBY: I have a co-worker, "Amber" who has always been large. She has looked like she was pregnant the entire two years I have known her. She can also be a liar and an attention-seeker. I am pregnant for real. Soon after Amber found out, she began telling our co-workers that she, too, is pregnant — with twins. She has said this before, and then she faked a miscarriage. She is now bringing ultrasound pictures to work that I discovered she had downloaded from Google Images. Everyone knows Amber is lying, but she keeps it going like she believes it herself. Abby, should I try to save her the embarrassment and tell her that everyone knows she's faking? Or should I just sit back and see where the lying gets her?

REALLY EXPECTING
DEAR REALLY EXPECTING:
Your co-worker appears to be mentally disturbed. This is something that should be discussed with Amber's supervisor, so perhaps an intervention can be done and she can get the help she needs. As much of a concern as this is for you, it should be even more so to her employer.

Because there is no way to predict how she might react if her fantasy is threatened, you should NOT be the person to question it. If she's taking time from work for OB/GYN appointments, her employer could request a note from the doctor.

DEAR ABBY: I have been dating "Jared," who is the nephew of my sister's husband. Due to the family situation, this is a very weird relationship. I was widowed at 22. I am now 27, and this is the first relationship I have had since my husband died. I'm not sure what to do.

Is it wrong to date Jared? How do I introduce him to family and friends? My sister always refers to him as her nephew. That makes me feel like my relationship with him is incestuous.

MIXED UP IN WISCONSIN
DEAR MIXED UP: Because Jared isn't a blood relative, your relationship with him is not incestuous. Introduce him to family and friends as Jared, the friend you're dating. If the relationship becomes more serious, introduce him as Jared, your boyfriend or fiancé. But please stop feeling guilty about your relationship because you're doing nothing wrong.

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have: 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult

ARIES (March 21-April 19) ★★ Assume responsibility, even if you would like to proceed differently. Good will surrounds you. Emphasize gain, both financially and emotionally. Good communication transforms a project, allowing greater give-and-take. Tonight: A must show.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) ★★★★★ Your ability to move through an issue quickly after a jolt defines you as a person and demonstrates your strength. Your rebound results in possibilities. Suddenly the world seems positive. Open up to an offer with no strings attached. Tonight: Try a new spot.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) ★★★★★ A work associate or dear friend makes it clear that he or she needs and wants more time. Your resilience and ability to flex with changes emerges in order to make time. Count on being busy. A financial agreement is subject to change. Tonight: Lighten up the moment.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) ★★★★★ Unexpected developments could toss your schedule into chaos. Communications take you in a new direction and help you move through a hassle. If you allow others to play a more dominant role, you will be much happier. Tonight: Surrounded by people.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) ★★★★★ Manifesting another's ideas proves worthwhile on several levels. You encourage others to go for what they want more often. Rather than being critical, demonstrate and teach through example. Trust that your message will be heard. Tonight: Try mellow.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) ★★★★★ You might not be able to contain yourself, even if someone rains on your parade. Your vision also might be broader than many people's, as you look to growth and many changes. Tonight: Christen the weekend.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) ★★★★★ You could be far more in touch with your feelings than you want to acknowledge. Hunkering down and hiding them will only backfire in the long run. A family member or roommate has the gift of gab. Tonight: At home.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) ★★★★★ Understand that there are many ways to approach a situation, even if you do not always or automatically see them. Someone easily could rebuff an idea or suggestion. Try expressing the thought differently. Revise plans if need be. Tonight: Out and about.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) ★★★★★ Be aware of what is said. The unexpected plays a major role in planning and at work. Maintain your traditional sense of humor, and you'll discover just how easy it is to move past a limitation. Tonight: Whatever you do, you do it with grand style.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) ★★★★★ Someone close to you decides to buck the status quo, particularly as to how it relates to you. Be willing to move in a new direction and incorporate different ideas without this person's support. Romance seems to be weaving through the air. Tonight: The world is your oyster.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) ★★ Knowing when to cut your losses is important. If you do, others could be shocked by your actions and let you know in no uncertain terms. Your individuality and independence come into play. Listen to suggestions politely. Tonight: Perhaps with a favorite person.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) ★★★★★ Taking a risk financially could cause a situation to tumble one way or another. How you see this gamble might be very different from a partner's perspective. Follow through on a suggestion. Tonight: Celebrating.

That Chapter 36.12 be amended as follows:

§ 36.12 OFFICERS; TERM OF OFFICE RELATIONSHIP TO BARDSTOWN/NELSON COUNTY VOLUNTEER FIRE DEPARTMENT, INC.

(A) Chief.

(1) After an election by the members, the name of an individual shall be recommended for appointment by the Mayor. Upon receipt of said recommendation from the members of the Fire Department, the Mayor shall appoint the Chief for a one-year term with approval of the City Council. In the case of denial or removal of the Chief, the membership shall hold another election and recommend another name for appointment.

(2) Term of office. The term of office shall be for one year or until an election is held as provided for in the Standard Operating Procedures Manual and Handbook.

(B) Officers other than the Chief. The membership shall elect such other officers as may be necessary for the safe and efficient operation of the department and as enumerated in the chain of command.

(Ord. passed 9-14-26); Am. Ord. 615, passed 11-26-96)

The Bardstown/Nelson County Volunteer Fire Department, Inc., a fire department organized and incorporated under Chapter 273 and Chapter 75 of the Kentucky Revised Statutes, which provides services outside the city limits of the City of Bardstown, may be housed in and operate out of the facilities owned by the City of Bardstown so long as its chief and officers are the same as those of the City of Bardstown Fire Department.

This ordinance shall be in full force and effect following publication as required by law.

This ordinance or parts of ordinances in conflict herewith are repealed to the extent of such conflict.
